

Shanley Thompson
Treasurer
Women in Mining – Northwestern Ontario

Shanley is an environmental consultant specializing in impact assessment and permitting. She has worked on projects from a variety of sectors including mining, forestry, utilities, and infrastructure. She has also worked as a regulator in Nunavut (Nunavut Impact Review Board) where she reviewed proposed projects and conducted compliance monitoring at a large gold mine. Shanley was born and raised in Thunder Bay. She has a BSc in geography from Queen's University, a MSc in forestry from the University of British Columbia, and a PhD in geography from the University of Victoria. Shanley currently works for Hatch in Thunder Bay.

I have been fortunate in my life to have worked with many strong female leaders, and I happy to have the opportunity as a member of Women in Mining to encourage young women to pursue any number of technical, scientific, or professional occupations within the mining industry.
